Mayor, Judge Harper of Tinley Park welcomed the guests on behalf of Tinley. Commander Ray Jacobs of Tinley Park Post 615 of the American Legion, presented the newly installed Commander, L. D. This caused the citizens of Tinley Park to realize that some unusual feature was in town and soon the streets were lined with local crowds, who were wending their way to Sanger hall, where again the Drum Corps gave a demonstration of why they were State Champions.

Everyone was impressed with the solemnity of the occasion and during the impressive ceremony, the whole congregation was overwhelmed and truly impressed. The perfect timing and team work were grand. State Cuts

Bremen Relief Funds

The state cut its allocation of relief funds for the Township of Bremen approximately in half for the month of March, and the Board of Town Auditors was faced with the problem of raising sufficient funds to continue relief for these families in need.

The township is required to produce seventy-five percent of the taxes levied by it for poor relief in order to obtain full state aid and has been unable to do so because its tax collections do not reach that percent age.

The Board at its meeting last Tuesday evening, authorized the supervisor to obtain credit in the amount of Seven Hundred Dollars to bring the payment of the township for poor relief up to the 75 percent of the amount of taxes levied by the township for poor relief, and authorized the issuance of a Tax Anticipation warrant against those taxes already levied, to take care of this indebtedness.

In this manner, the Board was able to continue relief for those families in need for the month of March. The Illinois Emergency Relief commission has also agreed that upon the Township obtaining credit to seventy five percent of the amount of its levy for poor relief purposes, the full state allocation of funds will be made to the Township beginning in April. This will mean approximately $2,000 a month more from the state for poor relief purposes.

The Board also wishes to advise that the number of families on relief dropped from approximately 700 a year ago, to 178 at the present time.

War Front Moves to North Atlantic Sea As Nazis Unleash Bombers, Submarines

By ROGER SHAW

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

NEW YORK.—This is a funny war, but no longer a phoney war. The phoney phase, if any, passed with the Norwegian campaign of a year ago. Since then, things have been grimmer and grimmer. Various fronts have evolved. There are the Balkans. There is Gibraltar. There is North Africa, and East Africa, and Albania. There are the fifth columns all over Europe that favor German rule, and the opposition fifth columns that detest German rule—the treadmill of the Nazi military boot.

Then, there is the hammer and the anvil phase. England is the sturdy anvil. Germany is the vengeful hammer. The Spitfires and Hurricanes and Heinkels and Messerschmitts fight it out in the third dimension, on an aerial front such as mortal man never saw before. There are Coventries and Hamburgs and all manner of hapless atrocities. But are these aviatory antics decisive? Apparently not, to date. London may be gutted, but it still laughs and goes to the movies and sings "There'll Always Be an England." In Berlin, only 500 houses have been damaged, according to recent reports. British factory power has been slowed up, but the "arsenal of democracy," so-called, is gaining momentum and hastening replacements to the scenes of insular carnage. The life-line of empire no longer runs up the Mediterranean and on to India. Instead, it runs across the North Atlantic, from Roosevelt to Churchill, and back again.

Most Important Front.

This is where the most important front comes in, as this is written. It is the watery U-boat front. The purpose of the U-boat is to cut the life-line of empire, nullify the American "arsenal," and leave the damaged British factories to shift for themselves as they face the hideous hammer of Thor. It is also intended to cut down on foodstuffs, and thereby loose still another of the terrible horsemen of the vaunted apocalypse. In the minds of many critics, the U-boat threat outweighs the Balkans, North Africa, and the late lamented battle of France, and even the airplanes. It is, as they say, of the essence. All this remains to be seen, but the weather is getting better—which means that things may be getting worse.

The high point of the U-boat threat in the first World War was April, 1917. It was the same month in which America entered the conflict. There was a connection between these events. But in those days, the active U-boats were not too numerous. Seldom were there more than 30 at sea, at any given time. They operated only from such limited spots as Cuxhaven and Kiel in Germany, Ostend in Belgium, and Austria's old Adriatic ports, for the Mediterranean trade. In 1914, Germany started the war with less than 30 submarines, and perhaps 10 more in the process of building. In the course of the war, there was something like 700 laid down.

Long Training Needed.

It takes a long time to produce and train a good U-boat commander—some critics say all of five years. Despite the hundreds of German submarines between 1914 and 1918, half a dozen experts accounted for no less than 70 per cent of the Allied ship losses. Naval statistics verify this astonishing fact.

Winston Churchill recognizes the true state of affairs. His cry is ever for sub-fighters, destroyers, for convoys.

Coast Guard to Convey Migrating Pacific Seal Herds

SEATTLE, WASH.—Ten Coast Guard cutters will soon convey Pacific seal herds as they migrate from warmer waters off the coast of the United States toward their summer homes near Alaska.

When the seals congregate in numbers off the coast of Oregon and Washington, the patrol will get underway. They will accompany the herd as far north as the Aleutian islands to protect them against poachers.

Germany isn't the only nation conscious of the submarine's power. Another new addition to America's large submarine fleet is shown being christened by Mrs. Wilhelm Friedell at Vallejo, Calif.

In this war, the Germans have an air fleet schooled to co-operate 100 per cent with the subs. Of these, in 1939, there were about 60 to 70. What the figure now is, nobody accurately knows. It's on the up and up, for fast streamline production has been introduced in the German shipyards, and in interior-located factories. U-boats can easily be shipped about on railroad flatcars—even up over the Alps, like Hannibal's elephants. Further, most of the British navy is now busy in the Mediterranean. In the last war it was based on Scotland, and therefore in a far handier position than is now the case. The French coast is a great basic convenience to Hitler's Admiral Raeder, and so are the north-reaching Norwegian fjords. The Kaiser didn't have such an advantageous frontage.

Germany's outstanding submarine hero is Captain Gunther Prien who steered his craft into Scaev Flow in 1939 to sink Britain's Royal Oak. In the first World War 70 per cent of Allied ship losses were attributed to only six experts.

The royal air force is constantly bombing German U-nests along the vast coastal stretch, when they might better be hammering German factories in the interior. This costs men, planes, explosives, time and money. Meanwhile, the Germans have been concentrating on small submarines. These can be built more quickly, they cost less, and they are just as effective for short trips around the British Isles and west of Ireland. Another very important factor is this: They require much smaller crews, and submarine crews are singularly hard to train. When it comes to U-tactics, Germany may be more pressed now for U-men than for U-boats. As for sub commanders, to date there are no outstanding individuals except the well-known Gunther Prien—the Perriere of the second world war. Even Churchill admires Prien, and has said so.

Small Craft Needed.

What the British need is small craft to hunt the subs. They have produced a sort of "corvette"—a type modeled on the fast little "chasers" that professional whalers use today.

The British have lost heavily in shipping, in the past year and a half. They had never made up their losses from the last war, and the fresh inroads cut seriously into the sum total of his majesty's tonnage.

The British shipyards, at Newcastle and Glasgow and elsewhere, are trying to speed up production as best they can. But it's far easier to sink ships than to build them, and in some cases the shipyards are under aerial bombardment, to boot. At night there are blackouts, and these delay loadings and unloadings in the ports. The ports, too, have taken a terrific hammering from Herr Goering, and in some cases their dock facilities are badly damaged, or even closed up. No longer may floodlights be used to hasten a 24-hour schedule. In short, the German planes dovetail "nicely" with the U-boats and the French and Scandinavian ports, to produce an all-round picture of ill omen.

Churchill has a clear naval head. He recognizes the true state of affairs. He relegates subs, Balkanics, and Africanders to second or third place. His cry is ever the same: For the new "corvettes," for destroyers, for convoys, for submarine detection devices to catch the U-boats "sitting." Meanwhile, in the German naval ranks, two or three small submarines are taking the place of any single big one of the "1918" type. The mutinous mermaids will soon be learning of mass production at its deadliest, and in its most sinister form.

The no-man's land of 1941 is the billyow north Atlantic, and its doughboys are old salts. Watch it. It's the presentday "Hindenburg Line."

Aluminum Utensils May Be Restricted By Defense Needs

KINGSTON, N. J.—If homemakers have their hearts set on buying aluminum pots and pans in all the shapes and sizes they want, they're going to find it a little difficult, especially in the next few months to come. And if papa decides the family needs a new radio about two months hence, he's liable to discover he's out of luck.

It appears that civilian consumers in this country will have to stand back for a little while and watch the shiny, strong, light metal shaped around airplanes, put into military motors of all kinds, fixed into place in innumerable parts of ships. As for pots and pans—the army and navy will need plenty of those, and will come first.

A spokesman for the Aluminum Company of America, at the moment the only producer of virgin aluminum, estimated that the bottleneck made by the defense demands will probably be opened within 120 days. Retail distributors have a much gloomier outlook. Radio manufacturers seem plainly scared, and one manufacturer says openly that he thinks a shortage of the useful metal will utterly disrupt radio production.

Defense needs can stop the production of radios, for you see, aluminum is a requirement for condensers, and other parts in a radio. Manufacturers of ordinary aluminum household utensils have been informed that all future orders will require at least eight weeks for delivery. Heretofore, the metal could be picked up almost immediately.

A houseware buyer in New York reports that, although the stocks of pots and pans appears to be adequate for a few weeks, there is already a shortage on delivery of certain items—mainly the 7-inch frying pan.

The spokesman for the Aluminum Company of America estimates that nearly 600,000,000 pounds of aluminum will be produced by that organization in 1941. Defense needs are expected to total some 350,000,000 pounds, which is about what the entire output was in 1939, leaving 250,000,000 pounds for civilian use.

Sometime in March the new Lister, Ala., plant of the Reynolds Metals company—the expansion and development of which has been aided by government money—undertook to manufacture some 40,000,000 pounds additionally. By the spring of 1942, the output will be upped to 60,000,000 pounds. Eighty per cent of this will go to the government at all times.

The Reynolds company also is preparing to construct a second manufacturing plant in the Pacific Northwest, which, by the end of this year, will manufacture another 40,000,000 pounds of the metal.

Collapse of opposition to 'Lend-Lease' Bill due to attitude of Senators' constituents... Statement of Britain's war aims helpful only to Hitler.
(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—Most people out in the country think that the opposition to the lend-lease-Britain bill conducted a long-drawn-out filibuster. There is a surprising amount of sentiment that the delay in the passage of this measure was inexcusable.

Putting to one side the merits of the opposition, the fact remains that the crumbling of the opposition, the sudden collapse which permitted the final passage of the bill by the senate on March 8, was a surprise and totally unexpected. Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, spearhead of the opposition, had been so confident in January that he was sure he could hold off a final vote until June! He missed his guess by three months.

The question is WHY? There was no lack of filibustering power. The debate could have been indefinitely extended.

Innumerable amendments could have been proposed, and each one of the opposition senators could have talked to the limit of his physical capacity on each one of them. There was no other plan than to do precisely this when the debate opened. What caused the abandonment of this fierce resolve on the part of Wheeler and his colleagues?

WATCH 'HOME' SENTIMENT

To find out why the filibuster collapsed one has to look outside of Washington, and outside of New York. The simple answer is that the men conducting that filibuster, for that is what it started out to be despite all the denials, did not like what they heard from back home about the reactions.

A man doesn't get to be senator, except at rare intervals, without knowing a good deal about politics; without knowing just what a political organization can do and what it cannot do. Voting the way a particular constituent wants you to vote on some particular issue does not mean that he will vote for you next time you come up. But when you vote AGAINST what that constituent wants, particularly if he happens to think that particular issue is the most important thing in the world, is very apt to make him vote against you the next time you run regardless of everything else.

Too many people, in too many states, thought this lend-lease bill and its bearing on the war the most important thing in the world. Lots of them did not bother to write letters, but every senator has plenty of listening posts. In a nutshell, that's the answer.

President Roosevelt Opposes Statement of 'War Aims'

Nothing is so annoying to President Roosevelt and his lieutenants in the field of war activities as the frequently repeated demand of many so-called intellectuals and commentators that the British government state its war aims.

"It reminds me," one very close and trusted advisor of the President stated, "of two men grappling in a death struggle. Each has almost reached his opponent's jugular vein. A casual passerby shouts for one of the men to stop and state what he is fighting about. As though he could stop and face the fact that in that pause his enemy would almost certainly kill him."

There is no secret about this view of such demands in the administration. Authorized spokesmen in high positions are saying it to small groups in off-the-record talks every few days. They are doing their best to make the country understand, without coming right out and saying so, that nothing in the world would serve the purposes of Hitler much more successfully than to have a statement of British war aims right now.

POLICY IS UNSOUND

It takes only a few moments' consideration of this problem to see why. Years back President Coolidge was fond of saying to inquirers about a certain policy: "I will tell you what I have decided to do, but not the mental processes by which I reached that decision. You may agree with the decision, but you might not agree with the mental processes."

Take a look back at the last war. Obviously a majority of the people of the United States were in favor of going into it.

A strong minority, consisting of most of the German-Americans and pacifists, were opposed.

But suppose that the eventual terms of the Versailles treaty had been announced at that time! Then remember how many national groups in this country were bitter against Wilson in 1920 because of those terms!

On the other hand, what would be gained by a statement of war aims at this time? Whom would it please, the Nazis and a few critics, most of whom have been opposed to U. S. aid for Britain anyhow.

Shaking Liver Good Exercise For Mind, Body

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

A FRIEND asked me to look at an "exerciser" for which he had taken the agency. It consisted of a square box on which he asked me to sit or stand. I stood on the box he touched a button and immediately the box and I began to vibrate.

I told him that this was the same idea as the mechanical horse found on shipboard or in a gymnasium which "shook up" the whole body.

What about these mechanical seats or horses? Can they help the body?

There is no question but that the vibrating of the entire body in this manner is helpful. Movement of all kinds is stimulating which is just what many business men and others need after sitting for hours at a time at their desks.

For a long time I wondered how these men with country estates kept as well physically as they did, despite the fact that they were often very heavy eaters. It was only when I remembered that so many of them did a lot of riding that I found the answer. The jogging of the horse was just what was needed to stir up their liver, empty the gall bladder, and stimulate bowel action.

For years it was believed that exercise that shook up or squeezed the liver would make the bile flow and this was proven a few years ago by research workers at McGill university. In fact, I recently came across a rhyme in a little book, "Byways to Health" by Wood and Dandell, as follows:

"A jaundiced young gent in an attic
Once thought he had trouble hepatic (liver)
He bought him a flivver
Which shook up his liver
And now his mentality's ecstatic."

For those that are unable or unwilling to ride, and for those who are unable to take active exercise, anything that will shake up the liver will help them mentally and physically.

For the vast majority of the middle-aged who do not play golf or other games, a daily walk at a brisk pace, some bending exercises with knees straight, and not eating heavy meals should keep liver and bowels active and the mind free from depression.

Vaccines of Value In Preventing Colds

SOME years ago a survey was made from the northeast to southwest part of the United States (from Maine to California) to see just what effect the weather had on causing colds. Taking a strip of territory some miles wide, it was found that at certain seasons of the year, fall and winter, the number of colds in California was as large as in Maine.

Now it is not as cold in California as in Maine, so that cold weather, in itself, is not a cause of the common cold.

On returning from summer cottages it is the "usual" thing for many individuals to develop head colds. It is agreed that it is the leaving of the outdoors to live indoors whether in Maine or in California that is the cause of a great number of colds. It is not only losing the outdoor moist, fresh, "sunshine" air, but breathing the still, dry, dust laden air of the indoors that irritates the lining of the nose, throat, sinuses and bronchial tubes.

You are reading and hearing more about getting vaccinated against getting smallpox, hay fever, diphtheria and scarlet fever. What about the vaccines for colds? Will they prevent colds?

Dr. L. D. Bristol, New York, in the American Journal of Public Health, gives results of treatment of standard stock (cold) vaccines, in six different groups of factory workers (totaling more than 19,000). The time over which this treatment against the common cold was available varied from 17 months to five years.

"On the whole the study shows an apparent reduction in the severity of the attacks, their length, and complication arising from colds."

It would appear then that as a "part" of the treatment for colds vaccines have some value.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Is the presence of sugar in the body waste always a positive indication that one is suffering from diabetes?

A.—Sugar could be found in the water of everybody at one time or another. However, if you carry excess weight or there is a history of diabetes there is always the possibility of developing diabetes. It would certainly be wise to be guided by your physician who would, of course, know best how to treat your particular case.

INSTALLMENT 3 THE STORY SO FAR:

Dusty King and Lew Gordon were joint owners of the vast King-Gordon range which stretched from Texas to Montana. When building up this string of ranches, they continually had to fight the unscrupulous Ben Thorpe. Thorpe, rival of King-Gordon in power and wealth, but he had gained his position through wholesale cattle rustling and gunplay. Their opposing interests came to a showdown when the Government announced the auctioning of the valuable Crying Wolf land in Montana. Bidding went high at the

CHAPTER IV

They buried Dusty King five miles south of Ogallala, beside the Great Trail which he himself had pioneered. They thought he would want to rest out there in the open plain, near enough to the cattle trail so that the rumble of hoofs would sometimes come to him through the ground.

Over his grave they piled boulders, after the fashion of the prairie men. Bill Roper himself fitted a cross of railroad ties, the most durable and massive timber available at Ogallala.

After that was all done, and night had come on, and everybody had gone back to town, Bill Roper went back to that lonely cross and squatted on his heels against the pile of stone.

After a while a ridden horse came toward the cross at a walk; and Bill Roper remained motionless, unseen against the stones, as the horseman came up.

The rider stepped to the ground and walked slowly toward the cross, the reins of his pony on his arm.

"Quien es?" Roper said. "Oh, hello, Dry Camp."

Dry Camp Pierce came and sat down beside Bill at the foot of the stones. "Find out anything, in the town?"

"Hell, no."

"No," Dry Camp repeated after him. "No, and they won't."

"You talk mighty sure, Dry Camp."

"I talk mighty sure because I am mighty sure. Nobody saw Dusty killed except the three men that done it; and one other man."

Bill Roper's hand shot out and caught Dry Camp's lean arm in a grip that bit like a trap. "Who was that?"

"Me."

There was a silence, sharp and hard, before Bill said, "How is it you haven't told anybody this?"

"Haven't had any chance to talk to you," Dry Camp said. "I'm telling you now, ain't I?"

"Who was it?"

"Cleve Tanner; and Walk Lasham, and Ben Thorpe."

Dry Camp took a match out of the pocket of his cowhide vest and chewed the end.

"You see—" he searched for his words painfully, after the manner of men who are much alone—"Dusty, he tied his horse out back of the Lone Star Bar, in the angle of the wagon shed. There's a kind of a corner there, like you can't see into it from any place, hardly; and what with it getting dark—"

"Where were you?"

"I was in Bailey's Harness Shop, next door. I saw Dusty turn off the walk, and walk back between the buildings. I'd been watching for him, because I wanted to speak to him a minute. I went back through the harness shop, and I was just going out the back door. And then hell bust in the wagon shed angle."

"The time it happened," Bill Roper said, "there must have still been a little light."

"Enough to see by, all right. These three varmints step out of the shed quick and quiet. Dusty knew what he was up against, all right. His gun came out; but Walk Lasham grabs his gun arm with his left hand and bears down like he was wrestling him. Then the whole works seems to blow up, as all three of 'em let loose. They just stood and throwed it into him, and it seemed like he was never going to fall. Ben Thorpe pumped two more shots after Dusty was down, and dead."

That was all the story. Both of them seemed to recognize that there were no questions to ask, nothing to add.

"I promise you this, Bill," Dry Camp said at last. "I can't go up and testify against these men. You know why. If I let it be known that I'm here, that's the finish of me. But that would be all right. Only, what court, that we got, would believe me against them?"

Bill Roper said, "There isn't anything you can do, I don't suppose."

"Oh, yes, there is. There's one thing I can do. I'll have to kind of bide my time, and make it sure; but—I'm going to get me these three men."

"No, you ain't," Bill Roper said. "We're going to go at this thing a different way. Trouble with you, you're figuring these three men as just three men. They ain't. They got the biggest string of tough outfits in the country, and they spread all the way from the Rio Grande to the Rosebud, and beyond. We got to bust up the whole works, if we want to get any place."

Dry Camp was silent for several minutes. "What you aim to do?"

"I aim to start in Texas, where Cleve Tanner runs Thorpe's breeding outfits in the Big Bend; I aim to tie into him piece by piece, till Ben Thorpe is smashed out of the West."

"Lew Gordon will never stand for it."

"Then, by God, King-Gordon has come to its split-up!"

Silence again before Dry Camp said, "And I suppose I'm expected to just kind of stand aside and stay out of it and see how you work it out, huh? Well, I won't do it, Bill."

"You're in this, Dry Camp."

"How am I in it?"

"I've got to have me an outfit. It's got to be made up of boys that aren't afraid of Ben Thorpe or all hell; boys that haven't got anything more to lose. I'll need near fifty men. But to start off with I want Lee Harnish, and Tex Daniels and Tex Long; Nate Liggett—Dave Shannon—"

"Wow!" said Dry Camp. "You get those four or five in the same bunch, they'll eat each other alive."

"That's the kind I want," Bill Roper said. "I want a wild bunch such as the West has never seen before."

"And me—what am I supposed to do?"

"You — you're heading south. You're going back to Texas and you're going to start rounding 'em in."

"What you offering these boys?"

"Horses and grub, and what other stuff we'll need. Not another thing."

They sat silent for a long time more.

"All right," Dry Camp said. "I'll go."

In the twilight Bill Roper swung down in front of the little shack which served King-Gordon as a loading-foreman's office at their Ogallala pens. Within, Bill Roper found Lew Gordon sitting alone.

"I just talked to a man," Roper said, "that saw the killing."

Gordon was instantly alert. "Who was it?"

"He's a man that can't come forward, because he's already an outlaw in his own right. But Dusty was killed by Ben Thorpe, and Walk Lasham, and Cleve Tanner, the three working together. Walk Lasham bore down Dusty's gun."

Gordon had been fiddling with a pencil, and now he threw it on the table in front of him. "We're figuring you to take over the Crying Wolf, Bill. Dusty's half of King-Gordon naturally will stand in your name now; Dusty never paid any attention to any other kin. But the Crying Wolf was where he figured for you to go and work; and there isn't any call to change that, now."

"You can count me out of the Crying Wolf, Lew."

"What do you want to do?"

"We're going to branch out a new way," Roper said. "We're going to have a warrior outfit. And I'm its new boss."

"I don't get you."

"We're going to carry the war into the other camp, Lew. For every outfit that Ben Thorpe has grabbed by force of arms, he's going to lose two; for every head that has come into his herds by rustle and raid, two head of his are going to be missing when he makes his roundup count. First thing, I'm going to break Cleve Tanner down in Texas. After that—"

Lew Gordon looked Bill Roper hard in the eye, smiled a little, and shook his head. His voice was slow and deep, stubbornly emphatic, as a granite cliff is emphatic. "No. We've never gone outside the law yet, and while I live we never will. We play the straight game always; and if we lose—that's in the hands of things beyond us."

Bill Roper angered. "I know how you feel about it," he said, keeping his voice down. "You swayed Dusty that way always. If you'd looked at it different, the guns would have been out years ago—and it would have been Ben Thorpe that went down. As it is—Dusty King is dead. Now you want me to drift on as we always drifted on, and I'm supposed to forget that Dusty's out there under a pile of stones. Well, I'm not going to play it that way, Gordon."

"While you're with King-Gordon," Lew said slowly, "you'll play it as I say you'll play it."

"If you want to buy me out," Roper said, "you can do it at your own price. Because I'm going to do exactly what I tell you I'm going to do; I wouldn't run a sneak on you, Lew."

"You figure," Lew Gordon said incredulously, "that you, one youngster on horseback, can smash up Ben Thorpe? You wouldn't last forty seconds longer than a celluloid collar on a dead gambler."

"There'll be a few go with me," Roper said.

"Who?"

"Dry Camp Pierce for one; Lee Harnish, Tex Daniels, Tex Long; in all, maybe fifty men that I think I know where to get."

Lew Gordon looked as if he would explode. "You're naming the most vicious outlaws on the plains," he said. "If you ever get those men together, it will be the most infernal wild bunch that ever—"

"By God," said Bill Roper, "I'll show you how to clean a range or break a range; I'm telling you I don't care which."

Lew Gordon slapped his hand on the table; it fell with a dull and heavy wallop, but so hard it seemed the top of the table would split.

"No! No, by God! Not under my brand. Not in a hundred years..."

"Then draw up the terms of the sale."

Gordon was silent again, for a long time. He seemed very old, and very tired. "Reckon you're man enough to make your own decisions, Bill."

"Thanks, Lew."

"But do me one last favor—will you? Don't decide here and now. Take a couple of days to think it over. It's for your own good. But I'm asking it as a favor to me..."

Bill Roper dropped his eyes, and for a moment or two he hesitated.

"I'll take an hour, he decided in compromise."

CHAPTER V

Bill Roper walked slowly to the Gordons' tall house, on its rise at the edge of the town, and let himself in softly. He wanted desperately to talk to Jody Gordon; but it was nearly midnight, and he couldn't make up his mind to wake her.

As it happened, decision was unnecessary. In the fireplace some lengths of cottonwood log still burned, and before the fire Jody lounged upon a buffalo robe, wide awake.

"You've been a long time."

"I know." He stopped beside her, half raised her in his arms, and kissed her lingeringly. Her arms and her lips clung, making it difficult for him to think of the road he had chosen. But presently he sat beside her on the buffalo robe, and turned his eyes to the coals.

"There's some stuff we have to talk about, Jody."

"I can think of better things to do with firelight than just talk."

"Jody — King-Gordon is splitting up."

Jody brought herself up on one elbow. "Why, Bill—what do you mean?"

"Dusty's share comes to me, as you know. I—I'm taking it out."

"You're—Bill, you must be loco!"

"Maybe. I'm going against Ben Thorpe."

"But—but—" Jody was at a loss for words.

"Since the trail began, he's stood for everything we're against. Four of the biggest rustling gangs in the country are directly hooked up with him, if it could be proved. He's stopped at nothing, and where he couldn't force his way he's bought his way. But now—he's gone too far."

CHRIST'S COMMISSION

LESSON TEXT—Luke 24:36-53.
GOLDEN TEXT—Behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you.—Luke 24:49.

Calvary and the darkness of the tomb gave way to the glory of the resurrection morning. Jesus had appeared to the two on the Emmaus road, and when they hurried back to Jerusalem to tell the eleven disciples, who were gathered behind barred doors, they found that He had already appeared, not only to the women, whose story they did not believe (see v. 11), but also to Peter (v. 34). While they were excitedly discussing this great wonder, apparently torn between belief and unbelief, joy and sorrow, suddenly Jesus appeared, coming through the barred door and greeting them with a blessed message of peace.

I. A Risen Christ for Fellowship (vv. 36-43).

The disciples were bewildered and slow to believe. Perhaps we would have done no better.

Note how patient and gracious He was in dealing with these frightened—and, in a sense, stupid—disciples. He might have been so discouraged by their unbelief as to be short and sharp with them, but He was not.

We need to learn of Him. There are weak brethren even in the church of Christ who need our tender and patient consideration (see Rom. 15:1; I Thess. 5:14). Christ died for the weak brother too (I Cor. 8:11).

What a blessed time of fellowship the disciples and the Lord had together. Such times are greatly needed for our mutual encouragement. Let us not forsake the assembling of ourselves together (Heb. 10:25). In a day of need and trial those that fear the Lord should speak often with one another and with the Lord (Mal. 3:16; I John 1:7).

II. A Dependable Book for Guidance and Instruction (vv. 44-46).

Jesus gave His own endorsement to the Old Testament as a dependable record of the prophecies concerning His person and His work of redemption. The critics of God's Word must face the fact that their man-made theories are in conflict with the testimony of the Son of God. Of the two, we know whom we will believe!

Notice that an important part of the Lord's fellowship with His disciples was devoted to opening their minds so they could understand the Scripture. The word "opened" might be translated "disentangled." He took out the prejudices, the wrong ideas, and set them free to understand and appreciate the Scriptures.

III. A Great Message for Proclamation (vv. 47-49).

Fellowship with Christ and a knowledge of God's Word which does not result in an aggressive witness for Him is quite useless. We meet Him and learn His truth that we may carry it out to all nations, not forgetting (note it!) to begin at the wicked Jerusalem which is right at our doorstep.

The business, and the only business, of the Church is that witness. We need to renew our commission, get it clearly in mind, and then proceed to carry it out. "But," someone may say, "we are not able for this great task." Of course not; but He is able, and will enable us.

"Power from on high" is the portion of God's witnesses. This world worships power—mechanical, political or military power. The greatest power of all is spiritual power, and God is ready to give it to His faithful witnesses.

Note that the message is one of repentance and remission of sins ("in His name"). The gospel of Christ is the primary need of men and women, boys and girls, in your community and mine; yes, and to the very ends of the earth.

IV. An Ascended Lord to Worship (vv. 50-53).

The ascension of Christ is not often made the subject of a sermon or message in the church, but it is an important doctrine of Scripture. It marks the completion of the work of Christ, and His return to the place of honor at the right hand of the Father. There, before the Father's throne, He is the advocate of every believer, the pledge and assurance of a perfect and eternal fellowship between God and believing man.

The worship which the disciples gave to Christ as He ascended went on as they returned to their appointed place of witness, for they continually praised Him. Such should be the attitude of every true believer. In the temple of his own heart there should always be the joy of the Lord as He is there worshiped and adored.

Now we have completed our study of Luke, but we cannot stop here, for the Gospel, according to Luke's own statement in Acts 1:1, was only the story of what Jesus "began both to do and to teach." The continuation of that account is found in the book of Acts, which we begin to study next Sunday.

FIRST ASSIGNMENT

By KARL GRAYSON
(Associated Newspapers.)
WNU Service.

AS FATE would have it Ed Stanley's first assignment upon entering the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police service was to investigate a trap-stealing episode in the country north of the Little Silver river. Ed's brother, Paul, accompanied him. Paul had been a Red Rider for five years. He knew the ins and outs of the game and Ed worshiped him. Ed was 22 and Paul was 29. The older man had been and was now everything that was fine. The service which he represented stood for things that were honorable and worth having.

It was winter. The brothers spent two days musing over the frozen wastes of the northland, and another half day skimming over the surface of the Little Silver.

At noon of the third day they came to a clearing in which stood a cabin. Smoke curled from its chimney.

"That would be it," Paul said. "The description is perfect. Wonder if Eysen is home."

Mark Eysen was the man under suspicion.

Paul swung the dogs off the river and stopped them at the edge of the clearing. He loosened the service pistol in its holster, told Ed to stay with the dogs, and approached the cabin. He had covered less than half the distance when the cabin door flew open. A man appeared in the aperture bearing a rifle. There was a puff of smoke, a sharp report, Paul crumpled in the snow.

Ed cried out and started forward. The rifle spoke again, and a little puff of smoke kicked up two feet ahead of the boy. He stopped, and in that instant the training which he had received before entering the service came to check his madness. He returned to the dog sled, secured his own rifle, drove the dogs to the shelter of the river bank, and began to stalk the cabin.

It wasn't until darkness had fallen that Ed was able to reach his brother. Miraculously Paul wasn't dead. Ed carried him back to the dog sled, built a fire, poured hot tea between his lips, dressed his wounds and an hour later had set out on the return trip to the post.

It was a record run, but Paul died before they reached the post. He returned to consciousness once and talked rationally with his younger brother. "Remember the code," he said, smiling wanly. "We Red Riders have a code to go by. Bear it in mind always. And don't feel too bitter about me—it's all in the game, you know."

This was exactly what Ed would have expected Paul to say, but he felt bitter nevertheless. He knew he'd never rest until he had killed the man who'd murdered his brother.

Two days after Paul died, Ed, grim-faced, set out for the Little Silver country in company with three members of the mounted. They were armed with a warrant for the arrest of Mark Eysen.

Ed had anticipated a long trek before they even came upon the trail of the fugitive. He was, therefore, surprised and not a little puzzled upon finding the cabin in the clearing to be occupied. Remembering his previous experience he cautioned his three companions. "It was decided to surround the cabin and challenge it before attempting to break in."

The challenge was issued and remained unanswered. One of the mounted stepped into the clearing and began approaching the cabin. Instantly a rifle exploded and the policeman dropped in his tracks. He crawled back to safety under cover of his companions' fire.

The siege on the cabin lasted three days. One of the Riders had been killed, another wounded. Ed Stanley and Constable Norman Lee were the only two able-bodied men remaining, and their supply of ammunition was rapidly diminishing.

The two men held a conference. It was agreed that one of them would have to return to the post bearing their wounded comrade. Ed insisted on remaining on the scene.

Ed waited until the dog team had swung out of sight. Then he returned to the observation point from which he had been firing upon the cabin. He remained there for fully an hour, without giving any indication of his presence.

Then it was that Ed knew what had happened. The man was snow-blind!

ahead of the boy. He stopped, and in that instant the training which he had received before entering the service came to check his madness. He returned to the dog sled, secured his own rifle, drove the dogs to the shelter of the river bank, and began to stalk the cabin.

Two days after Paul died, Ed, grim-faced, set out for the Little Silver country in company with three members of the mounted. They were armed with a warrant for the arrest of Mark Eysen.

Ed had anticipated a long trek before they even came upon the trail of the fugitive. He was, therefore, surprised and not a little puzzled upon finding the cabin in the clearing to be occupied. Remembering his previous experience he cautioned his three companions. "It was decided to surround the cabin and challenge it before attempting to break in."

The challenge was issued and remained unanswered. One of the mounted stepped into the clearing and began approaching the cabin. Instantly a rifle exploded and the policeman dropped in his tracks. He crawled back to safety under cover of his companions' fire.

The siege on the cabin lasted three days. One of the Riders had been killed, another wounded. Ed Stanley and Constable Norman Lee were the only two able-bodied men remaining, and their supply of ammunition was rapidly diminishing.

The two men held a conference. It was agreed that one of them would have to return to the post bearing their wounded comrade. Ed insisted on remaining on the scene.

Ed waited until the dog team had swung out of sight. Then he returned to the observation point from which he had been firing upon the cabin. He remained there for fully an hour, without giving any indication of his presence.

Then it was that Ed knew what had happened. The man was snow-blind!

ahead of the boy. He stopped, and in that instant the training which he had received before entering the service came to check his madness. He returned to the dog sled, secured his own rifle, drove the dogs to the shelter of the river bank, and began to stalk the cabin.

It wasn't until darkness had fallen that Ed was able to reach his brother. Miraculously Paul wasn't dead. Ed carried him back to the dog sled, built a fire, poured hot tea between his lips, dressed his wounds and an hour later had set out on the return trip to the post.

It was a record run, but Paul died before they reached the post. He returned to consciousness once and talked rationally with his younger brother. "Remember the code," he said, smiling wanly. "We Red Riders have a code to go by. Bear it in mind always. And don't feel too bitter about me—it's all in the game, you know."

This was exactly what Ed would have expected Paul to say, but he felt bitter nevertheless. He knew he'd never rest until he had killed the man who'd murdered his brother.

INSURE THE FUTURE PROGRESS OF BREMEN TOWNSHIP

VOTERS OF BREMEN TOWNSHIP:

ON APRIL 1ST, YOU WILL CHOOSE THE MEN WITH WHOM YOU WILL ENTRUST THE MANAGEMENT OF YOUR TOWNSHIP BUSINESS FOR FOUR LONG YEARS. Choose Wisely and Well!

The old bosses of Bremen Township, Erp, Hulett and Clarke are leaving no stone unturned, in their campaign to get their fingers back into Township affairs. Four long hungry years, deprived of the 'take' from the Road Fund, have made them so desperate, that they have resorted to every expedient, even to that of appropriating the name of a respectable organization, to cloak their rancid clique.

But it is the same old "Citizens Coalition Party"—hiding behind simple men, whose lack of political experience has made them ready dupes of the Township Bosses. It is hard to understand why men who occupy prominent social and business positions, allow their names to be placed on such a ballot, knowing that they would be but small cogs in a ruthless political machine.

LET US STUDY THEIR LINE-UP:

For Township Supervisor, the Citizens Coalition Party, or "Better Government Party" as they would like to be called, hides behind the respectable front of E. G. Fairbank. Here is a man, a socialite from Beverly Hills, who aims to retire as a Gentleman Farmer on his estate, a man who fills an important official position in a large corporation, the man behind whose exalted front, the Bosses of the Citizens Coalition Party, or rather of the "better government party", attempt to hide. In every public talk, he has proven himself ignorant of the duties of a Township Supervisor, even to promising to appoint a Board of Appeals, to reverse his rulings on Relief cases. That Board of Appeals, fellow citizens, will be none other than the machine bosses, Erp, Hulett and Clarke. But how can you, in all fairness to the man, expect him who never has had to keep body and soul together by the sweat of his brow, who has never known what it meant to be cold, hungry and ill-clothed, how can you expect him to deal with the problems of the Supervisor's office with human sympathy and understanding?

For Township Clerk — None other than Will E. Erp. Son-in-law of Jack Clarke; brother-in-law of Harry Clarke—just a different spelling of a family name, but of the same brood, fighting to keep their control of Bremen Township. This person has the gall to publicly style himself as "a property owner and a tax-payer". But John Toman, Cook County Treasurer has branded him a "tax-slacker" by publishing his name on the Cook County delinquent tax list, for failing to pay taxes on over 48 pieces of property. Yet for years he has lived from your tax-money, drawing a fat salary as a bookkeeper in John Conroy's office. Why is he battling so hard for another taxpayer's job? Is it because he expects to build up the family fortune? Your future tax bills will reflect your judgment. CUT YOUR TAX BILL DOWN BY CUTTING ERP OUT.

For Township Assessor. Ellis G. Flaws, and how: Still in the kindergarten class in politics, he is telling it up and down the land that he is good and he admits it. He claims he is a Master Salesman—that he can sell the people anything, two-pants shrouds to widows and Frigidaires to Eskimos, and that qualifies him for the job of Assessor. This Superman promises to cut your taxes—something the thirty-nine country town assessors have not been able to do, even with their years of experience and strong connections. His public statements how he will juggle the tax assessments—prove his ignorance of the duties of a Township Assessor.

For Township Collector. Mr. Fleischhauer would have liked to run on the Progressive Party Ticket but felt that since he and his family owe their patronage jobs to the Erp-Clarke machine, he could not risk his livelihood by bucking them now. The machine would sure be out of wack if this cog was taken out.

For Highway Commissioner. Here is the office that the Citizens Coalition Party or "better government party" as the bosses would like to have it called, want to control, and will go to any extremes to get it, for in the years of Jack Clarke management, the profit was good. Had to be careful whom they nominated, so decided to keep it in the family and Howard Hulett was made to run as the machine candidate. Howard admits he can build roads—built them for the County, State and U. S. Government. He built them well—government inspectors and heavy surety bonds took care of that. But what is his record as road builder in Bremen Township under the rule of Jack Clarke? Let us examine the record just as it stands in the Township Clerk's books.

From the years 1925 to 1937 Bremen Township paid out of the Road funds on orders of Jack Clarke, $78,000. $36,941 went to H. & C. Motor Service; $31,641 went to Howard Hulett; $10,167 went to Lester Hulett; (H & C Motor Service stands for Hulett & Clarke). Notice that all the money was kept in the family. Judge for yourselves how big the profit was: In 1932, a depression year, only $11,000 was collected for road funds, but the records show that $10,500 was paid to the Clarke machine. Think back, you voters who lived in the township during this period. Did your town roads up to 1937 look as though $78,000 was spent upon them? Don't you suspect that you paid for thousands of yards of imaginary stone? The audit of the road fund last year showed that no bills were on file to support these thousands of dollars. Where was Bookkeeper Erp with all his knowledge of accountancy and control systems, that he didn't supply a few to his poppy-in-law; or won't his systems work on the Clarke machine? These figures cover a period of 12 years—the Clarke machine milked the township road fund for twenty-five years, besides drawing pay as commissioners and engineers.

To balance up the machine, you are offered Ejdynt, Webster, Paul Schwaighart Jr., Baumgartner and Robinson for Justices of the Peace. Not a qualified Justice among them; but sitting as a Board of Auditors they are pledged to do the bidding of the bosses. And last but not least the bosses offer three "merciful" constables.

AND HERE IS YOUR PROGRESSIVE Party:

Founded as The Progressive Party in 1937. Still proud of its name and accomplishments; still the PROGRESSIVE PARTY in name and deeds—Proud of the qualified men who are candidates on its ticket.

For SUPERVISOR Human, understanding, Walter Dohl. Served you faithfully as Justice of the Peace, even though handicapped by sitting as MINORITY member on the Board. He knows people, likes to be among them, fully experienced to solve their problems. He is a businessman and administrator and will safeguard his office and keep it free from any breath of scandal.

For HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER Conscientious and capable "Bill" Kreis. In the short four years in office, he has improved the township roads, treating all sections alike and spreading his limited money with sound good judgement. Your road taxes did not buy him trucks—it bought you roads and road machinery. Another four years, and he will have overcome the mud trails left by the Clarke machine.

For TOWN CLERK Capable and honest Ed. Reimer. No breath of scandal has tarnished his 18 year record of faithful service. His accounts are straight and open to the public.

For TOWNSHIP ASSESSOR Charles F. Nielsen still fighting the taxpayers battle, trying with the cooperation of the other country town assessors to force a fairer spread of real estate taxes. He is earnest and sincere and will continue to do his work in your interest.

For COLLECTOR Walter Mancke, anxious to serve his fellow townsmen, he offers you every facility to make your tax payment convenient.

For JUSTICES OF THE PEACE Jean Reget, Clare Moore, Charles Bockstahler, Hollis Abbott, Leonard Jakes—here is a group of men worthy of the title of "Judge." Fair minded, qualified by profession and business experience, they will represent your interests as they sit on the Board of Auditors. No bosses nor political machine behind them.

For CONSTABLES A full slate of them—each a police officer in his own section. Their enlarged field of operation as constables will benefit the township. Ed. Reynolds, Jos. Czekalski, Walter Chevers, Christ Steinhagen, John Kletzke, are pledged to serve you.

THERE IS YOUR TICKET -- DEMAND INTEGRITY OF YOUR PUBLIC SERVANTS -- YOU WILL SERVE

A REPORT to America

The Ford Motor Company's business has always been to serve the needs of the American people. In providing them with low-cost transportation for the past 38 years, we have developed one of the country's largest and most useful industrial units. During a national emergency, we feel that these facilities should be devoted without reserve to our country's needs. Toward that end we started rolling months ago, with these results:

1 A $21,000,000 Ford airplane engine factory, started only 6 months ago, is nearly completed. Production will start with an initial order for 4,236 eighteen cylinder, air-cooled, double-row, radial engines.

2 We are building a new $800,000 Ford magnesium alloy foundry, one of the few in the country. It is already producing lightweight airplane engine castings.

3 Army reconnaissance cars — military vehicles of an entirely new type — are rolling off special Ford assembly lines at the rate of more than 600 a month. We have produced Army staff cars and bomber service trucks.

4 The government has given the "go-ahead" and work is now under way for the fast construction of an $11,000,000 Ford plant to produce bomber airframe assemblies by mass production methods.

5 Several months ago work was started, on our own initiative, on an entirely new 1500 horsepower airplane engine especially designed for mass production. This engine is now in the test stage and plans are being developed for producing it in large quantities when and if needed.

6 A Ford aircraft apprentice school has been established, to train 2000 students at a time.

That is a report of progress to date.

The experience and facilities of this company can be used to do much of the job which America now needs to get done in a hurry.

Our way of working, which avoids all possible red tape, enables us to get results and get them fast. This benefits users of our products and workers who produce them.

We are ready to make anything we know how to make, to make it to the limit of our capacity if need be, to make it as fast as we can go, and to start the next job whenever our country asks us to. And to this end, we know we have the full confidence and loyal support of the workmen throughout our plants.

Listen This Sunday To Dr. Hutchins Radio Anti-War Talk

Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, President of the University of Chicago, will speak on "The Proposition is Peace" Sunday forenoon March 30, 12:15 to 12:45 EST over the Mutual Network, with about 175 stations carrying the feature.

It is felt that this speech will be one of the high lights of the campaign, as Dr. Hutchins is one of the most able proponents of the non-involvement point of view in America today.

Please be sure to listen to the Mutual station.

The last speech Dr. Hutchins made was one of the most widely quoted that has been presented on the non-involvement point of view.

From that speech came the history making quotation "The path to war is a false path to freedom."

Dr. Hutchins forthcoming speech made on the occasion when he indicates that he is tired of the international game of bluff in which America is trying to play a part, will make great strides in developing our program against involvement in Europe's and Asia's war.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear son Erwin Monr who passed away April 1st, 1938.

Three years have passed since that sad day,

When one we loved was called away,
God took him home, it was His will Within our hearts he liveth still.

Surrounded by friends we are lonely
In the midst of joy we are blue,
Beneath the smile on our lips we have a heartache,

Longing, dear Erwin for you.

RYTHEM ROLLERS

We dedicate this week's column to "the man who comes around" and barges in on our column. Grrrr.

It's well seen Friday was "kids" night. Did you see Lizzie, Dottie, Pat, Betty, Beanie and Irve there with all the little kids?

And speaking of kids, Freddie's theme song should be "I must have been a beautiful baby". You should have been a chorus girl Freddy.

The Raving, Ranting, Ray and Vicious Violent Velma are feuding—tell us what it's all about kids. Surely not love.

Speaking of love, who were you falling so hard for Jimmy? We didn't see Rose with her diamond ring. Putting 2 and 2 together. So that's why Lester looks so aggravated.

Hear that thunder? That was only sound effects for the storm clouds on Walley's face. But Swanie's soothing strains of "Our Love Affair" makes him look like a spring morn. By the Way! The corner is reserved fellas.

June's record "Between 18 and 19 on Chesnut street" almost caused the collapse of the rink—take it easy on those corners, Jeanette.

We'd like to throw a couple of orchids to Rose who is home sick. Dottie is sick too—but don't worry, it's only love sickness. Where is Dr. Frietag?

We'll be suing you and we do mean the one who wrote R. R. last week.

Mrs. Walter Mancke returned home Wednesday from a trip to Iowa.

OAK FOREST

By Eleanor Tschulin

Mrs. H. Mancke, Mrs. E. Tschulin, Beverly Munson and Eleanor Tschulin saw the "New Pins and Needles" show in the loop last Saturday afternoon.

The Forest Ridge Woman's Club will hold their next meeting Wednesday April 2 in the home of Mrs. M. A. Hall Sr., from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. and this includes a pot luck luncheon.

The James Sniders entertained the following guests last Saturday evening: Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Arata and daughters of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. John Sheehan, Middlethian, Wm. L. Sheehan, Oak Forest, Mr. and Mrs. E. Tschulin and Eleanor of Oak Forest.

The St. Christopher Sewing Circle met in the home of Mrs. M. Broloh March 27th.

"THE ETERNAL GIFT..."

The world premiere of the first sound-motion picture ever made of the Catholic Solemn Mass, "The Eternal Gift", will be presented by the Servite Fathers at the Chicago Civic Opera, March 31 and April 1, it was announced Saturday by the Rev. Hugh Calkins, O.S.M., in charge of the production.

The Rev. James R. Keane, O.S.M., beloved founder of the Perpetual Novena, has a leading role in the film, as Celebrant of the Mass. Rt. Rev. Monsignor Fulton J. Sheen, D.D., internationally famous as America's finest pulpit orator and renowned for his radio work, is featured in the picture as narrator. His Excellency, Most Reverend Samuel A. Stritch, D.D., Archbishop of Chicago, appears in the sound-movie to give his full approval to this dramatic presentation of the Mass.

This long awaited ten-reel sound-movie of the Easter Mass which was almost two years before the camera and in recording has been acclaimed for its sacred beauty by leading members of the Catholic clergy.

Father Calkins, who is a member of the staff of the Perpetual Novena said:

"Nothing like this has been done before. This sound movie takes a sacred subject that is as familiar as anything possible could be to a Catholic and presents it in an utterly new light. All the powerful beauty, the sweet sanctity, the heavenly significance of the Holy Sacrifice that is so much an integral part of Catholic life has been magically caught by the camera and the sound track."

The sound movie which runs an hour and forty-five minutes was produced under the supervision of the Perpetual Novena in honor of Our Sorrows Mother. With few exceptions, all scenes in the picture were taken in the world-famed Our Lady of Sorrows Church, Jackson Boulevard and Albany Ave., shrine of the Perpetual Novena. More than 1,500 Novenites appear as "extras" in this gigantic production.

The cast also includes Father Hugh Calkins, O.S.M., as Deacon of the Mass and Father Frank Calkins, O. S. M., as Subdeacon.

Music of the Mass, both vocal and instrumental, which authorities agree has reached a new peak in inspiration, was under the expert baton of Rev. Edwin V. Hoover, musical director of the Chicago Archdiocese. It was sound-tracked by members of the world-famous Chicago Symphony orchestra, the choir from the Holy Name Cathedral and seminarians from the St. Mary of the Lake Seminary, Mundelein, Ill.

The production was filmed and recorded in RCA sound by the Chicago Film Laboratory, Inc.

DOES LENT CHALLENGE YOUR COOKING ABILITY?
(See Recipes Below)

SPEAKING OF LENTEN VEGETABLES

Yes, speaking of Lenten vegetables reminds us that the Lenten season has again returned—that season when Lent challenges us as good cooks to produce something new and different—something which will entice the appetite of the family—something that will perchance become so great a family favorite that it will remain a “must” on our recipe list all through the year.

Such is the list of new ideas for cooking vegetables as contained in this column today. Not only will you like these new ideas for cooking vegetables—but also equally as much I think you will like some of the ideas for serving them. Note the canned peas as shown in the photograph above. Look good enough for any company dish, do they not, yet all that was done to dress them up was simply to surround them with onions and carrots and the carrots were garnished with tiny sprigs of fresh parsley.

Thus it is that everyday foods—foods full of nourishment and of food value become new favorites. Please from time to time, try each one of these recipes—you'll like all of them, I know.

If you've strange guests coming for dinner and don't know what vegetables they like, cover your confusion by letting them choose their own from this attractive arrangement of canned peas, onions and carrots.

French Fried Onions.

Use Spanish or large Bermuda onions. Peel and cut in slices 1/4 inch thick. Separate slices into rings, soak in milk for a few minutes. Drain and roll in flour. Fry in deep fat, which has been heated to 360 degrees F. hot enough to brown a cube of bread in 1 minute. When onions are golden brown, remove from fat and drain on absorbent paper. Serve very hot with broiled steak.

Vegetable Rice Ring.

1 cup rice
2 cups peas
1/2 cup tomato puree
1 teaspoon celery salt
1/4 teaspoon curry powder
1/2 teaspoon paprika
1/4 cup butter

Cook the rice in boiling salted water until tender and drain. Place in ring mold and dry slightly in oven. Heat peas. Remove rice ring from mold and heap peas in the center. Cover with sauce made of the tomato puree, seasonings and melted butter. Serve very hot.

Orange Sweet Potato Baskets.

Cut large navel oranges in half and scoop out centers. Cube the pulp and fold in hot mashed sweet potatoes. Fill the orange shells and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for approximately 10 minutes. Then top each half orange with a marshmallow and continue baking until marshmallow is puffy and golden brown. Remove from oven and serve at once.

Baked Tomatoes and Shrimp.

5 fresh medium-sized tomatoes
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons diced green pepper
2 tablespoons minced onion
1 No. 1 can shrimp—diced

Hollow out tomatoes. Melt butter in frying pan and add diced green pepper, onion, and shrimp. Brown mixture very lightly and fill tomato shells. Sprinkle with buttered cracker crumbs and bake until tomatoes are tender.

Stuffed Baked Onions.

3 large onions
1 cup soft bread crumbs
1/4 teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
4 slices bacon, minced and cooked
Buttered bread crumbs

Remove the outer skin of the onions and cut in half horizontally. Cook in boiling salted water, uncovered, until onions are almost tender (approximately 20 minutes). Take care to preserve shape of onions while cooking. Drain, and arrange cut side up in a buttered baking dish. Remove the center of each onion and chop fine. Mix with the soft bread crumbs, salt and pepper, and bacon. Fill onion halves and top with the buttered bread crumbs. Cover bottom of the baking dish with water and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) until onions are tender and bread crumbs have browned, approximately 1/2 hour.

Cauliflower a la Parmesan.

1 head cauliflower, cooked
3 tablespoons grated cheese
1 cup white sauce
1/2 cup buttered bread crumbs

Place cauliflower in greased casserole. Pour white sauce over cauliflower, and sprinkle with cheese and bread crumbs. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 30 minutes, or until crumbs are delicately browned. Serves 6.

Spinach Nut Ring.

(Serves 6)
3 cups cooked spinach
3 eggs (beaten)
1/2 cup bread crumbs
1/4 cup nut meats (cut fine)
1/4 cup bacon fat
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper

Chop the spinach and add the beaten eggs and other ingredients in the order given. Turn into a greased ring mold and bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.) about 30 minutes, or until it is firm. Turn out on a hot, round platter.

Savory Glazed Carrots.

Cook until onions are tender:
2 tablespoons onion, chopped
2 tablespoons butter
Flour carrots and saute with onions and butter for 10 minutes:
9 or 10 whole carrots, scraped (5 to 6 inches long)
2 tablespoons flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
Then pour on:
1 can consommé, diluted with
1/2 cup water

Cover tightly and cook until carrots are tender. Sprinkle with chopped parsley just before serving.

Corn Souffle.

4 tablespoons butter
6 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
2 cups canned corn
1 tablespoon chopped pimientos
1 tablespoon finely chopped onion
2 tablespoons chopped celery
4 egg yolks
4 egg whites, beaten

Melt butter and add flour, salt and milk. Cook until very thick sauce forms. Stir constantly. Add corn, seasonings and egg yolks and beat three minutes. Fold in egg whites. Pour into buttered baking dish, set in pan of hot water and bake 40 minutes in moderate oven (350 degrees F.).

Brussels Sprouts

Select light green, compact heads. One quart will serve six. Remove wilted leaves and soak for 15 minutes in cold water. Drain and cook uncovered for 20 minutes in boiling water. Add salt the last 10 minutes. Drain and serve with Hollandaise sauce.

AIR TRAVEL ON CREDIT

Seventeen air lines have announced an installment plan for air travel. No down payment is required. You get a ticket to go up if your credit rating proves you are the sort of person who will come down and make good.

The idea should bring many more customers. Lots of people would fly if they knew it wouldn't cost them a cent until after they had landed.

This is the first time in flying history that it has been possible to risk your neck on a credit basis.

It is almost like hoping, collect-on-delivery.

And it is going to seem strange but highly satisfying to get out of a clipper and just say, “Put it on my bill.”

This credit idea has already been introduced by some railroads. You can take a transcontinental choo-choo ride now on the so-much-down-and-so-much-a-month basis, and the idea is proving popular. Americans like to travel on the cuff, and there is something highly satisfying in being able to owe a railroad money.

When you have to plank down your money before you even get by the iron gates at a railroad terminal it takes something out of the trip. No matter how good the scenery is you discount it on the ground that it ought to be better for that much money.

If you are jerked out of an upper berth by a green engineer or bad brakes it is all the more exasperating when you know the discomforts have been paid for in advance.

But if you owe the railroad for the trip it's not so annoying.

The same will be true of airplane travel. Your hair may stand on end at the thought of a cross-country flight, but it becomes much easier to handle with a brush and comb when you know the company can't take a dime of your dough in advance.

And if you are dropping down by parachute, think of the satisfaction of knowing that it's all being done on the deferred payment plan!

There will be the kick, too, of getting a bill from the air line company with a “please remit” notation and dashing off a little note: “Gentlemen: “Your bill for flight to Chicago received and in reply I beg to state that I did not enjoy the trip. It was very bumpy, the plane was two hours late and it was so cloudy that I did not see half the scenery I was entitled to. I was not satisfied and hope there can be an adjustment.”

“P. S.—The hostess wasn't good-looking, either. I should say she wasn't within $10 of the good looks of the hostess on my previous trip so you can take something off my bill for this, too.”

CAN YOU REMEMBER

Away back when an invitation to get off the earth was practically an isolated instance?

Defense workers are being housed in trailers in some parts of the country. After a night in a trailer a man must be pretty glad of a chance to go to the shop where he can get a good rest.

The horse seems to be finished in the army, but it requires a lot of imagination to picture anybody shouting: “A tank, a tank, my kingdom for a tank!”

Two hundred thousand workers in the printing trades want radio advertising curbed. In this they have the hearty support of at least 90 per cent of the radio audience.

In this department's opinion radio advertising is, most of the time, offensive, annoying and a darned nuisance. Elmer Twitchell, for instance, is so bothered by it that he lists all the products ballyhooed on the air waves so he will remember what NOT to buy.

“Hellzapoppin” was performed for the draftees recently. This gave the boys a chance to laugh at the jokes that cheered their fathers up 25 years ago.

We can't be very close to war yet. George Cohan hasn't written a song for it.

An average of $30 was spent by every family in the country for amusements last year, mostly moving pictures. That's a lot of money to spend for souvenir soup spoons.

PATTERNS

SEWING CIRCLE

ONE little, two little, three little fashions—all in one easy pattern (No. 1313-B) that even inexperienced-at-sewing mothers can make with more fun than effort. This design includes a sleeveless pinafore, a brief trifle of bolero and a sunbonnet, all as cute as a baby in a bathtub! In the flaring pinafore alone, your tot can be as carefree and hoydenish as she could wish, playing on the sands or the greensward or her own backyard. When she adds the bolero, she's as demurely dressed for a visit to grandma as you could wish. The eye-protecting bonnet, of course, goes beautifully with either or both. Thus, by repeating this one pattern time and again, you can outfit your small daughter for spring and summer fun.

This little outfit looks adorable in red-checked gingham, flowered percale, plain or striped seersucker and buttercup yellow chambray, outlined with bright ricrac braid to match or contrast.

Pattern No. 1313-B is designed for sizes 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 years. Size 3 requires 2 1/2 yards of 35-inch material without nap and 8 yards of ricrac. Send order to:

TIPS to Gardeners

GARDENING AS HOBBY

GARDENING as a hobby can be made to pay excellent dividends. As an example, a Missouri woman reports she made a net profit of $300 from her two-thirds-acre garden in a single season. Figured at market prices, food used fresh was $230; food canned, $80; and food stored, $71. Seed and sets cost her only $20.

There are two major requisites to obtaining garden profits of this kind. They are, willingness to work and the use of quality seed. It is important also to devote considerable space to multiple purpose crops like beets, onions, and tomatoes—crops that can be used in a variety of ways.

Here, briefly, are the uses of principal multi-purpose crops; Onions—green, as relish; mature bulbs fried, stewed, or as seasoning; bulbs for pickle, and relish making; tops for seasoning; bulbs for storage. Tomatoes—fresh fruits for slicing or stewing, for immediate table use; for canning, or for making tomato juice, or tomato catsup; green tomatoes for frying, or for use in pickle relishes, or in pie filler (like mince meat); yellow fruits for preserves, juice, or immediate table use.

Cabbage—fresh in slaw, or salad; cooked for table use; canned as kraut, or stored. Beets—tops for greens; roots cooked fresh, canned, pickled, or stored.

NEW IDEAS

For Home-makers
By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

HOUSES of glass are realities today and, if you want to give any house a modern air, try to make the windows seem important. One way is to frame them in a group by covering the wall and leaving the glass exposed. A comparison of these two sketches shows that this may be done even though the windows are unevenly spaced. The cream colored walls, glass curtains and window shades are the same in both and the same two-toned green rug and the same lamp and pictures are used. The couch and cushions are also the same but the covers are new.

An inexpensive chintz with gray-green ground and a flower pattern is used for draperies and to trim the couch cover of heavier gray-green cotton material which is also used for the cushions. The glass curtains are hung on rods suspended from the picture moulding with picture wire and hooks. The side drapes are unlined but the valance is made over buckram. Both are tacked to pine strips and are hung with picture hooks. One end of the book shelves is closed in to make a head for the couch. The outside is painted gray-green and the inside dark green. The parchment lamp shade has green bindings.

NOTE: All types of curtains and draperies are clearly explained with cutting and making directions in Mrs. Spears' SEWING Book 1—draw curtains, lined draperies, pinch pleated curtains, cornice boards, valance boards, as well as standard and period type curtains. Directions for modernizing a couch, various types of chairs, and a fascinating assortment of other useful homemaking projects are contained in Book 5. Copies are 10 cents each. Send order to:

FOUR IDEAL FIELD SPEEDS ...16-MILE ROAD SPEED ON RUBBER

FARMALL (H)

● The flexibility of Farmall-H makes it the right tractor for a variety of jobs. Farmall-H has a 5-speed transmission with four ideal working speeds, and when equipped with rubber tires there is a fifth speed of 16 miles an hour.

Your first glance at Farmall-H shows you handsome new lines in the famous Farmall red. But the real thrill comes when you put this great new Farmall through its paces on your farm. You'll like the new comfort and ease of handling . . . and the way it pulls a plow through any kind of soil.

Get complete information about Farmall-H and what it will do for you. Ask us about big-size Farmall-M, and Farmall-A, the "Culti-Vision" tractor.
